Size: WAVThe goal of this new UCLA Chemistry and Chemical Biology Training Grant is to facilitate the training of a cadre of outstanding graduate students in Chemical and Biomolecular Sciences. The UCLA Chemical and Biomolecular Sciences graduate training program is one of the oldest and most successful programs in the nation, and has already graduated 14 Ph.D. graduates in the past five years. All of these graduates are pursuing research in the areas of Chemistry, Biochemistry and Molecular Biology at universities and leading biotechnology companies.

Trainees are selected by the Program Director and the faculty for their research and programmatic excellence and to ensure inclusion of trainees with a wide range of academic strengths and career goals, disciplinary backgrounds, and career interests. The training program is administered by the Chemical and Biomolecular Sciences (CBS) Graduate Program. The Training Grant is located in the chemistry building and provides student access to the expertise and facilities of the Graduate Division, as well as financial support. Graduate research is performed under the guidance of professional faculty preceptors at UCLA, its affiliated medical centers and other U.S. universities and institutions. The faculty at UCLA and its affiliated institutions are varied in terms of seniority, their training and experience, their contributions to research and teaching at the cutting edge of Chemical and Biomolecular Sciences f678ea9f9e
